adaface

MongoDB Developer Job Description template

MongoDB Developer Job Description Template/Brief

We are looking for a passionate MongoDB Developer to join our expanding team. You will work as part of a larger team to collaborate with development teams to implement innovative features into new products and apps while maintaining old ones.

You will create scripts to automate everyday chores and maintain data set security. Creating critical apps that people will use daily and contributing to the creation of a long-term database architecture will be among your responsibilities.

MongoDB Developer Job Profile

A MongoDB Developer is an IT expert that specialises in programming and designing apps and software with Mongo database technology. They are in charge of database management and is critical to the company's ability to provide essential information.

They comprehend and translate company requirements to create efficient solutions.

Reports To

- Sr. MongoDB Developer
- Tech Lead

MongoDB Developer Responsibilities

- Manage the design of database systems used for storing and accessing business-related information
- Create, edit, and remove data as needed by a specific application
- Make well-informed selections about database languages and technologies that are compatible
- Evaluate network architecture, execute several diagnostic tests
- Upgrade information security systems for maximum performance and navigation
- Document code, make progress updates and conduct code reviews and peer feedback
- Test code for errors and apply fixes

MongoDB Developer Requirements & Skills

- A degree or diploma in Software Engineering or Information Technology
- Strong analytical and problem-solving abilities
- Ability to configure schema and MongoDB data modelling
- Experience in Database security management
- Knowledge of MongoDB administration and installation in AWS and Red Hat